Katherine N. Kidera (Sociology & Early Education/2007) received a fellowship enabling her to study abroad in Copenhagen, Denmark. While there, she researched Danish multicultural education theory, interned in a Danish preschool and visited one of the world's headquarters for UNICEF.

Jordan Messier (Anthropology & Spanish/2003) travelled to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic to complete field research for her senior thesis. For six months, she studied in a Dominican University, conducted interviews and visited domestic violence shelters, NGOs, and the Dominican Women's Bureau.

Funded projects:
- "Space, Race, and Rap: Re-Presenting "Global Hip-Hop Diaspora in a Hyper-Ethnography"
- "The Interaction of Women's Family and Economic Roles in the Dominican Republic"
- "Creatively Exploring Human Rights"
- "Creative Approaches to Multicultural Early Education"
